POTATO CROP IMPORTANT AT THIS SEASON

[By Latest Mail]

WASHINGTON, D. C. — This is the season of the year when the farmer should pay particular attention to seed potatoes, cautions the department of agriculture, and the use of high grade seed would increase the returns from the potato crop of the country by many millions of dollars.

A conservative estimate of the increase that might be expected from the use of high-grade seed is certainly not less than 10 per cent. Such an increase based on the average production of the past five years would amount to over 34,000,000 bushels, having an approximate value of $21,000,000. Of the many causes which operate to produce a low average potato yield in this country, pure seed is an important one. The American potato grower pays too little attention to his seed potatoes.

The European growers, especially those of Great Britain and Germany, pay very strict attention to the quality and quantity of seed they use. This has led to the differentiation of the potato industry into seed and crop specialists. The seed specialists make a business of producing high-quality seed, while the crop specialists produce a high-grade table potato. No such differentiation, at least to the same extent, occurs in this country. While it is true that in certain sections there is a well-developed seed potato growing industry, but comparatively few growers in these sections are paying sufficient attention to the elimination of diseased and unproductive strains, or to keeping the variety grown free from mixture with other varieties.

By far the simplest and most promising means of developing high-grade seed potatoes is that of the tuber-unit and hill-selection methods. The former consists in selecting from the seed bin before planting time a considerable number of the most perfectly shaped tubers of from 6 to 8 ounces in weight. When planted these tubers are quartered, as dropped, into 4 as nearly equal parts as possible. This is done by splitting the bud-eye cluster in each direction from seed to stem end of the tuber. The four pieces of each tuber are dropped consecutively in the row at a distance from 10 to 12 inches apart in the furrow. All tubers showing discoloration of the flesh or other evidence of disease should be rejected.

By allowing an additional space between each set of four, the four plants from each tuber are definitely isolated from the adjoining ones, and the grower can readily observe any variation in vigor and uniformity between the units planted. This method also enables him to detect any mixtures that may occur in the variety.

At digging time the product of each unit is separately harvested, and a further selection made from the marked units of all those which most nearly approach the size, shape and smoothness desired. The selected tubers should be numbered with both field and unit numbers, and separately placed in small sacks. From each of the units retained, 10 of the best tubers should be selected for the next season's planting. It is desirable to maintain the study of each selection on the tuber-unit basis the following season because it permits a more accurate comparison of the behavior of each.

The hill-selection method consists in marking the most promising plants during the growing season. At harvesting time save only those which give greatest promise. Keep the progeny of each hill separate, and take the same data as outlined for the tuber unit. Plant on the tuber-unit basis the following season. For sake of uniformity, a definite number of tubers—five or more—should be planted from each hill selection. From this point on the methods given in the tuber-unit work should be followed.

The only requirements for the successful practice of the two methods of seed selections are a reasonable degree of painstaking effort on the part of the grower, some 12-inch garden labels, a small pair of balances, a sufficient number of suitable small sacks and a safe place in which to store the selected tubers until required by the next season's planting. In addition to this, the grower should have a breeding plot in which each season's selections may be developed up to the point of field-planting stock.

The selection of breeding plot need necessarily be divorced from the general field plot. In most cases it can be more conveniently handled if it is a part of the regular field. All that is required is to set aside as many rows as may be required to plant the selected tubers. These should be preferably on one side of the field so that they can be more readily observed. The planting furrows may be open, and a fertilizer distributed with the potato planter by removing the disks and setting the plow a trifle deeper. If a plow is used in covering, care should be exercised to avoid displacing the seed pieces.

The wedding ring as a symbol dates far back times, probably having its origin in the days of Tubal Cain, says the Indianapolis "News." It was at one time customary for marriage rings to be worn by both sexes, and this custom is largely followed on the Continent today. Our ancestors put the ring on the left hand, because they found it more convenient, and they chose the fourth finger because it is less used than the rest and more capable of preserving a ring from damage.

Grading for lawns and flower gardens is in progress over the ground adjoining the west facade of the Palace of Machinery at the Panama-Pacific international exposition at San Francisco. Gardeners under the direction of Landscape Engineer John McLaren, have begun planting lawn, trees, and shrubs over this area. Within a month, the landscape engineers will begin growing lawns and gardens around the main group of exhibit palaces.

The Montreal Tramways Company recently completed for the province of Quebec the first car designed exclusively for the transportation of prisoners. This vehicle will carry prisoners twice a day between Montreal and the new prison at Bordeaux, seven miles distant. The car will hold 54 passengers and is divided into two compartments for the purpose of separating convicted from accused persons, says the Electric Railway Journal.
